Rubber

NMCE rubber futures dropped Friday tracking the cues from the international markets. Asian rubber futures settled mostly lower Friday, weighed down by recent weakness in crude oil while position liquidation ahead of the weekend amid lack of clear direction. On Tocom, the benchmark December and the November contract ended the day session marginally lower, while most other contracts settled higher.

Natural rubber production in India, the world's fourth-biggest producer, declined 10 per cent last month after dry weather lowered yield in the main growing region, the state-owned Rubber Board said. Exports slumped to 750 tonne in the first two months of the year started April 1 from 5,000 tonne a year ago. Stockpiles rose to 178,000 tonne at the end of May, compared with 150,000 tonne a year earlier. India produced 855,000 tonne last year, up from 825,345 tonne a year ago and consumed 866,000 tonne, according to the board.

Global rubber consumption is expected to fall 7 percent in 2009 to 20.8 million tonnes, compared with an earlier forecast of an 8 percent fall, according to the secretary-general of the International Rubber Study Group on Tuesday. The group forecast that world rubber consumption will grow 2.7 percent in 2010 to 21.4 million tones, compared with a 3 to 4 percent growth forecast he made on March 24.

NMCE rubber moved in the range of Rs.97.80-96.30 last traded at Rs.96.60 (97.46). Open interest decreased by 142 to 2115. Rubber stocks at NMCE accredited warehouses stood at 174 Mt.

NMCE Rubber (July) Bullish above 96.99, next levels are 97.40, and 98.16. Bearish below 96.33, next levels are 95.94 and 94.62.
